Gross Out!

It's normal for teenagers to be weirded out when they have to make a move to a new town—but Brian and Terri Pickett have every reason to be weirded out. Their parents have made Gross Point their new home... and Gross Point is the kind of place that can weird out anyone!

Gross Point #1, produced by Mark Waid, Brian Augustyn, SM Taggart, and Roger Langridge, is more than a relocation tale. When the Pickett's yuppie parents picked Gross Point as their new home, they didn't realize that it was a magnet for the outré, the supernatural, the grotesque, and the bizarre—but Brian and Terri figure it out pretty quickly. Oddly enough, though, they seem to be the only ones who are aware just how odd this town is!

According to Brian Augustyn, co-writer of the premiere issue of the series, "The impetus— and most of the brainstorming [for Gross Point]—started with Marty Pasko and his editorial team. They set up the premise, the locations and a lot of the characters before we were contacted. Once we were inticed in, we were given free-reign to interpret, develop or recreate over the structure they provided. We did some of all of that, inventing a new character or two, fleshed out some of the relationships, etc., but mostly we worked in the playground Marty built."

Gross Point is targeted at the audience that has made series like Fear Street and Goosebumps so very successful. "Almost certainly the audience envisioned for this book is the young adult fan of Goosebumps and its ilk—it's a fertile field, and a popular genre," Augustyn said. "Marty and his crew wanted Gross Point planted solidly on that map, but with lots of yoks—and yucks. I don't think we're poking fun at the genre, as much as having fun with the genre. Goosebumps has its relatively satiric moments and is anyway usually lighter in tone than your average Clive Barker novel, so there is some precedent.Gross Point will, as I said, be of the Goosebumps, Bone Chillers school, by way of Tales from the Crypt—with just a little Plop thrown in for good, icky, measure."

What led Waid and Augustyn to a book so very different than their usual superhero fare? "Mostly it was our utter devotion to Marty Pasko—that and our notion that we're really funny guys. Working on Impulse and other similar fare, we've carried the assumption that we knew comedy, and our egos were easily exploited..."

Augustyn feels that a lot of the strength of the series comes from "the brilliant artwork of the genuinely cutting-edge team of Sean Taggart and Roger Langridge, who make all us fogeys look good."

"Waid and I are the scripters for the first issue only," Augustyn said. "After that it will be a rotating assignment, which we may return to occasionally in tandem, or solo." The second issue features the work of Rick Parker, Lisa Trusiani, Dan Slott, Joe Staton, and Roger Landridge.

Gross Point #1, a $2.50 comic, is scheduled for June 25th release.

Hullabaloo~Quite a Super-Shindig!

Part of the fun of superhero crossovers is seeing two very distinctive worlds come together to form something quite different from what readers would find in either of the series involved in the crossover. By that standard, Mike Allred's crossover project for Dark Horse should be one of the most fun crossovers ever published, because there are fewer heroes more different in style and tone than Superman and Madman.

The Superman/Madman Hullabaloo brings together the Man of Steel and the all too human absurdist hero in a strange adventure that lets them get some idea of how their worlds might look through one another's eyes. Creator Mike Allred is excited about the chance to have some fun with the quintessential superhero. "Wow! Superman, the superhero who all others have followed, is hanging out with my humble, everyman character Frank 'Madman' Einstein. I haven't had this kind of fun since I played with G.I. Joes in the sand pile with my brothers!" Allred said.

When Mike Allred creates a crossover adventure, he really creates a crossover—in this case, Superman and Madman each cross over with the other, in part, creating two different amalgam heroes, one in Metropolis, the other in Snap City. The merger is the result of an energy pulse in both worlds that somehow transports each hero to the other's home—but there's a little mix-up along the way. As a result, the Metropolis version has Frank's memories and sensibilities, enhanced by many of Superman's powers. The Snap City version has Superman's memories and sensibilities, but he only possesses a fraction of the abilities of Superman.

As weird as the situation is, it turns even weirder still when six other beings from two worlds also display the powers of Superman—but you'll have to wait for Hullabaloo #2 to find out who they are! Allred's Superman still wears the classic red-and-blue uniform instantly recognized around the world as the costume of the Man of Steel—or at least, that's what he wears up until the moment that the two heroes blend. From there on, each wears a costume that is a combination of Superman's and Madman's, complete with two distinctively stylish chest insignias.

For his inspiration, Allred seems to draw from the past. "Mike's rendition of Superman is so much like Fleisher's great animated version, I feel about five years old reading this comic!" Mike Richardson, Dark Horse president, said. "This is about as perfect as comics can get!"

The Superman/Madman Hullabaloo #1, the $2.95 kickoff issue of one of the zaniest three-issue miniseries you'll ever read, is scheduled for June 4th release.

Fantagraphics Offers Trip to Wally World

For over three decades, Wally Wood was one of the most respected and influential creators in the comic book field. His work with EC helped to redefine the look of science fiction comics; his involvement with Jack Kirby on Challengers of the Unknown helped to introduce a bold new look into the fledgling DC Silver Age Universe; his horror work for Warren Magazines made Creepy and Eerie must-reads for comic art fans; his short run on Daredevil is considered one of the highlights of the book's 30+ year run; his THUNDER Agents rivaled Marvel's 1960s comics; and his brilliant work with WitzEnd helped pave the way for independent comics. Quite a series of accomplishments for one artist!

Alas, since his death in 1981, all too little attention has been devoted to Wally Wood—but that's about to change. Beginning in Comics Journal #197, Fantagraphics is serializing an exhaustive retrospective on the career of the esteemed artist, beginning with a lengthy interview with the artist himself.

The Wally Wood project, will eventually appear as a two-volume 300+ page set in 1999, is the culmination of more than a decade's worth of work by Bhob Stewart, longtime Comics Journal contributor and former Wally Wood assistant. Stewart's unique insider's view on Wood's career offers him access to Wood's art files and to those who were close to the artist during his lengthy career, including his ex-wife Tatjana Wood and his studio mate Ralph Reese.

In an industry remarkably deficient in comprehensive inside looks at the men and women behind the medium, this lengthy project is a must-read for anyone with an interest in comic art and comic history. Comics Journal #197, a 112-page magazine priced at $5.95 that kicks off the serialization of the Stewart's insightful look at the career of Wally Wood, is scheduled for June release.

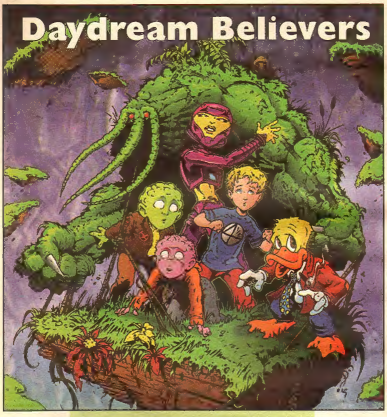
Daydream Believers



The Marvel Universe seems, at times, like a very strange place... but it's positively mundane compared to the strange places that a half-dozen denizens of the Marvel Universe are about to visit in Daydreamers, a new limited series by J. M. DeMatteis, Martin Egeland, and Howard Shum.

In Generation X #25, Franklin Richards (an amazingly powerful mutant in his own right), Artie (a thought-projecting mutant), Leech (a power-dampener, Tana Nile (a Rigelian alien) and Howard (a duck... or should we say the Duck) escaped almost certain destruction by being absorbed into Man-Thing—who, in addition to being a mucky antihero, is also the Guardian of the Nexus of All Realities. Now, the five fugitives from doom and their verdant ally are about to set out on one of the most fantastic voyages ever undertaken by anyone in the Marvel Universe as they travel through one dimension after another, learning more about their universe—and themselves—along the way.

Daydreamers is the same sort of grand fantasy adventure as Little Nemo in Slumberland or Akiko—but with one crucial difference: its voyagers are established characters in the Marvel Universe, and their journey is a part of that reality. J.M. DeMatteis is no stranger to the quest motif, since it played a crucial role in his Moonshadow series; joining him to chronicle this grand tale is Martin Egeland, the former artist of Aquaman, making his Marvel debut. Daydreamers #1, a mutant book with twist, is scheduled for June 11th release.

The More, the Merrier

Spider-Man has a long history of team-ups—in fact, the very first issue of his own comic guest-starred the Fantastic Four... and since then, the web-slinger has met virtually every hero (and most of the villains) in the Marvel Universe. So how can you keep such a gregarious hero a solo star? The answer is—you can't!

Marvel Team-Up #1 resurrects that popular Spidey team-up title from the 1970's and 1980's. In the pages of this monthly ongoing book, Spidey will call on the assistance of some of Marvel's best-known heroes as he deals with problems that he can't quite handle on his own. The first issue unites Spider-Man and Generation X to get to the bottom of a scheme involving two million dollars worth of poison money... money that's being dumped into Skin's old neighborhood.

Marvel Team-Up is written by Tom Feyer, who is joined by artists Pat Cliffe and Al Williamson (a very familiar team to fans of the acclaimed Untold Tales of Spider-Man). Marvel Team-Up #1, a $1.99 comic, is scheduled for July 2nd release.

Ain't It Cool News reports that Patrick Macnee has signed on for a cameo role in the new Avengers film starring Ralph Fiennes and Uma Thurman... And speaking of Ralph Fiennes, is it possible that he and not Nicholas Cage will be playing Superman? Tim Burton is almost definite for the Superman project, and he plans to bring screenwriter Akiva Goldsman in to do the script (instead of the Kevin Smith film, which insiders say offered a wonderful interpretation of Superman) and is considering Fiennes for the Man of Steel. (However, E! is reporting that it's Wesley Strick, the screenwriter for The Saint, who'll do the rewrite.) Also, it's reported that there's a really great Frank-Milleresque Batman scene in which the Dark Knight delivers a powerful Superman eulogy... The same source also says that MGM/UA hopes to fast-track the Spider-Man film, and they're optimistic that it'll be James Cameron's next project once Titanic is completed. You might look for 20th Century Fox to be involved in the Spidey film, since Cameron is under contract with that studio currently... And E! is reporting that casting is underway for the X-Men film, with both Jean-Claude Van Damme and Glenn Danzig being considered for the role of Wolverine...

Mark Crilley, Akiko's mastermind, reports that "Akiko #15 won't come out until July. The idea is to give me a little more breathing room between the completion of the art and the publishing of the book. Still, I don't think it'll be enough to get Akiko's name off that infernal Late Comics Report! I'm drawing as quickly as I can, honestly!"...

Mark Evanier sends the good news that "My partner and cartoonist Sergio Aragonés has been awarded this year's Reuben Award for Best Cartoonist—an honor that usually only goes to syndicated guys. Sergio is the creator of Groo the Wanderer and has been a regular in Mad Magazine for over thirty years. But they gave him the award anyway."

Good news for fans of Adam Kubert's work on The Incredible Hulk. "I'm pleased to report that, despite earlier reports that Adam Kubert will be joining Scott Lobdell on FF, Adam has—upon consideration—opted to remain with Incredible Hulk," Peter David posted recently. "Marvel respects Adam's choice in this matter and will be looking elsewhere for an FF artist. I am, naturally, quite pleased with Adam's decision. I know you will all be as well. And here's a bit of a first: Adam, having injured his back, is doing layouts on an upcoming issue, and dad Joe Kubert is doing the finished pencils."

Dan Jurgens, one of the creators involved with the DC Tangent project, sends a few words of explanation about what Tangent is. "Tangent is a project I conceived and brought to DC that features a new take on some familiar DC names with a new twist," Jurgens said. "Other writers include Todd DeZago, James Robinson, Karl Kesel, Chuck Dixon, Kurt Busiek, John Ostrander and Ron Marz. All in all, I expect it to be great. The stuff looks good. I often envied the chance that Julie Schwartz had in the 50's with Showcase where he was allowed to use names that existed already and re-start them off without adhering to previous material. That's what we're doing with Tangent."

Newsarama guru Michael Doran sent along oodles of info from Ralph Macchio. First, Werewolf by Night will be a part of the Marvel horror line; it'll begin as a three-part miniseries by Paul Jenkins and Joe Lee, focusing on Jack Russell while telling a contemporary werewolf story... Joe Lee will also be doing the covers for Satana, it appears...Man-Thing will also return, courtesy of JM DeMatteis and Liam Sharp... The horror titles should debut in October, but they will not be promoted as a separate line per se...

Jo Ladzinn will be the regular Cable penciller... Jim Chadwick, former design director for DC and Art Director for Malibu, is launching his own self-published book, Rennin Comics, in July. "I'm confident that Rennin Comics will appeal to readers who enjoy titles like Bone, Cerebus, and Ragnrop, but it certainly has its own unique qualities," Chadwick said... Enchanted, described as "a dark, gothic, slickly drawn miniseries that chronicles the ultimate battle between two opposing Magical Circles whose powers stem from another world," is a new comic by Robert Chang that Sirius will premiere this August... Fantagraphics has a second Jim Woodring collection of Frank stories slated for August; the 96-page book will feature 32 pages in full color...

Antarctic Press will debut an animated Warrior Nun Areala Video Preview in August. The $9.95 video will offer a sneak peek at some of the work being done for the spring '98 full-length Warrior Nun video, as well as interviews with Ben Dunn and others...

Flypaper Press has announced that their first comic book will be Hong on the Range, a cyber-western by William Wu (based on his 1989 Nebula and Hugo nominated novel) and Jeff Lafferty. The first issue of the three-issue series is due in July... Chaos Comics is producing a new quarterly, Cryptic Writings of Megadeath, featuring comic work based on Megadeath songwriter Dave Mustaine's work. To promote the comic, the first half million copies of Megadeath's June-release CD Cryptic Writings will contain promo cards for the Chaos series...

Harris Comics will offer readers an advance look at some of the material from their Vampirella/Dracula: The Centennial in August, when they offer a sixteen page Vampirella/Dracula & Pantha Showcase, featuring art, interviews, and more. The October-release Vampirella/Dracula prestige-format one-shot, released to coincide with the 100th anniversary of the publication of Bram Stoker's work, will feature material by Alan Moore, Warren Ellis, James Robinson, Gary Frank, Mark Beachum, and David Mack...

A Carl Barks Uncle Scrooge painting has sold at auction at Sotheby's for $505,000, making it the most valuable piece of comic-related art in the world... The Xeric Foundation (created by Peter Laird to offer financial assistance to self-publishing comic creators) has awarded grants totalling $24,000+ to Ellen Forney (I was Seven in '75), Jim Ottaviani (Two-Fisted Science), Henry Wolyniec (Wahhi), Rhyan Scrimo-Rhys (Sofa Jet City Crisis), and Gene Yang (Gordon Yumamoto and the King of the Geeks)... DC has promoted Vince Letterio to Assistant Manager—Direct Sales... Chaos! Comics has hired Drew Bittner as Development Editor...

Krome Productions will produce a trading card series based on Image's The Tenth this fall; a preview set of chromium cards will be available in mid-summer... Will Star Wars remain at Dark Horse Comics? Several big players in the field have also made their Star Wars pitch to Lucas and company; a decision about the license recipient will be made in the near future... Ace correspondent James McKeever sends news that MTV plans to add 2 or 3 new animated series per year, with at least one animated theatrical film every other year. Two series pilots being tested are Toxic Fox, featuring an 80s rock band, and Downtown, an urban series aimed at 13-18 year olds. MTV also plans to bring back Cartoon Sushi... Tarzan fans may wonder if their eyes are playing tricks on them next season: Xavier DeClie is replacing Joe Lara as Tarzan on the second season of Tarzan: The Epic Adventures. Jane will also become a part of the series, and there will be more action... The Sci-Fi Network has several miniseries in the works, including Invasion Earth, Dune, and Journey to the Center of the Earth...

Stuart Moore told AOL DC fans that Jon J Muth is writing and painting a Swamp Thing oneshot... Newsarama reports that Mike Heisler, who resigned as editor-in-chief of WildStorm not too long ago, is back again—but this time, he's Executive Editor at WildStorm, while Heisler and Jim Lee splitting the managing editorial duties... Batman & Robin Adventures: Sub-Zero, the one-shot based on the animated video release, has been postponed until October or November, the new release month for the video... The Golden Age of Marvel, that must-have compendium of Golden Age tales featuring Cap, Sub-Mariner, and other heroes, has been postponed but will be added to Marvel's schedule later this year.

JUNE CHECKLIST

The following comics, books, games, and cards are tentatively slated for release on the dates given; if no date is listed, the items are scheduled to ship sometime in the month of June. It's not uncommon for items to be rescheduled or delayed due to various circumstances, so it is possible that some of these items might miss their scheduled ship dates. Keep up with the most current shipping dates, talk with the folks at your friendly neighborhood comic shop for any last-minute changes. While changes in comic book shipping have done a great deal to ensure that virtually every store in the continental US receives its books on Wednesday rate, it's still possible that various parts of the country will receive books, games, and other items at different times depending on the weather, method of shipping used, etc.—so your shop could possibly receive some of these books on a different date than the one listed. When CSN is satisfied in time, we will make changes in our checklist to reflect the latest available information. And yes, we are aware that some publishers regularly run an average of a month late on many of their titles—nevertheless, we go by the schedules the provide and list issues they say we should anticipate sometime during the month.
